TIME to SHINE

He possessed the kind of looks that made you believe in genetics. Sharp jawline, a strong nose, and eyes the colour of weathered denim that held a quiet intensity. His smile was a rare, slow-breaking event that transformed his entire face, making the air around him feel several degrees warmer. It wasn't just about his symmetrical features or the effortless way he carried himself. It was in the way his laughter echoed, genuine and unguarded. It was in the focused gleam in his eyes when he talked about his passion, and the way his messy hair looked like

SHARP

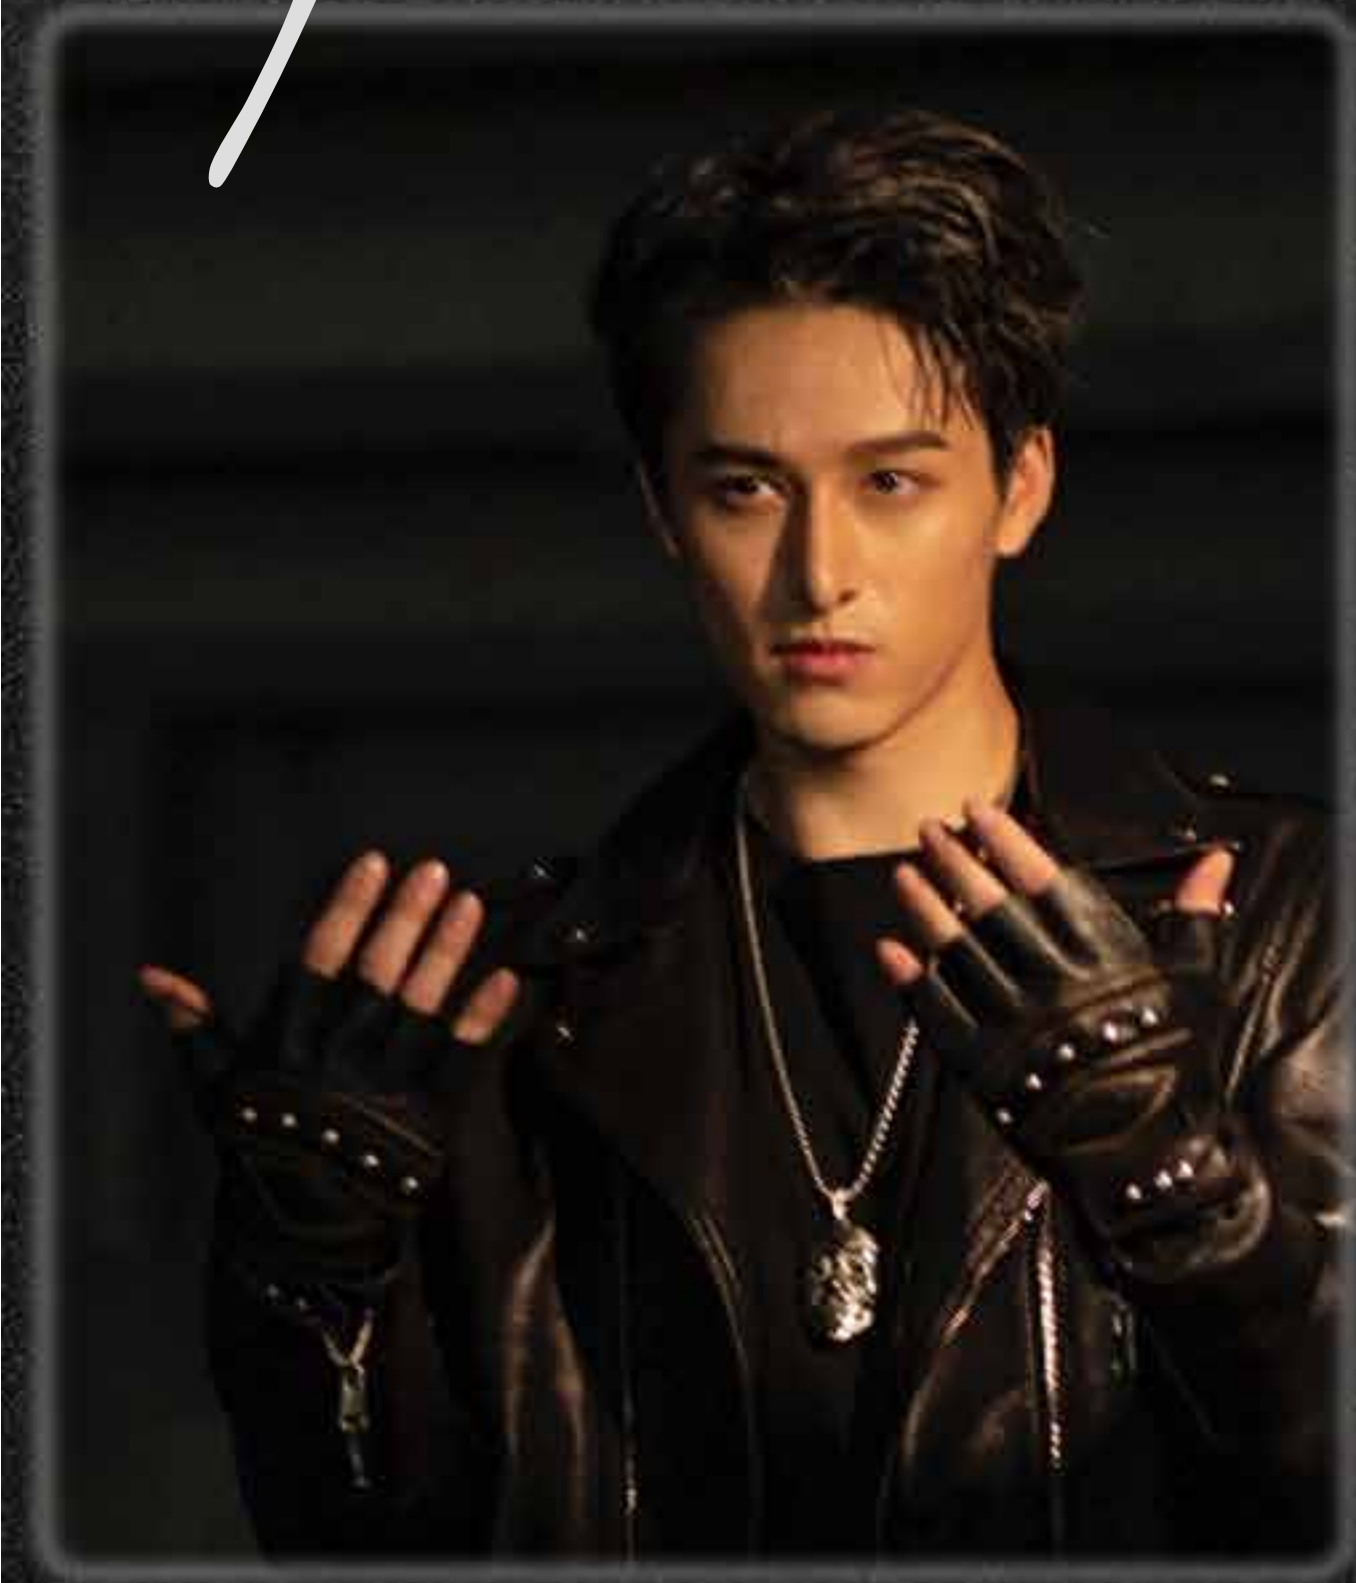

His attractiveness was a refreshing, uncomplicated thing. Sun-kissed hair fell usually across his forehead, and his eyes crinkled at the corners when he grinned—a wide, open expression that was utterly warming. He moved with an easy, athletic grace, whether he was on a sports field or just walking down the street, making you think of endless summer days. He had a presence that could stop a conversation across a crowd-room. All sharp angles, confident stance, and a gaze that felt like it saw right through you.
